FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Student Internship Search Hits the Web during Campus Philly's Online Internship Fair

College students access hundreds of new internships during free online fair, February 20th through February 24th, 2012.

GREATER PHILADELPHIA –Campus Philly's career website is again a top resource for regional student job seeking during its annual Online Internship Fair, February 20th through February 24th, 2012. Campus Philly invites college students to apply for internships with area employers on www.campusphilly.org/careers. The online fair gives students free, 24-hour access to opportunities.

Internships play a significant role in helping students secure full time employment after graduation. Almost all employers look for their entry-level employees to have some professional experience, from an internship, job or volunteer experience. Campus Philly's Online Internship Fair helps equip college students to do better on the job market once they graduate. In addition, according to Campus Philly's own research, students who have an internship during college are more likely to stay in the Philadelphia region after graduation.

"We have thousands of students at dozens of schools and employers often have a hard time finding them. The Online Internship Fair is our way of matching our talented students with employers who are looking to build their employee pipeline or just get some help with important projects," says Deborah Diamond, President of Campus Philly.

The Fair is open to and free for all regional students, but Campus Philly promotes the Fair most heavily with its 26 regional college partners. Internship positions can be searched by field or area of interest and positions for pay, for credit or for experience are all included and available.

Hundreds of new internships are available on the site now, with employers posting until February 17th. To participate, students must register at www.campusphilly.org/careers and upload their resumes. Students can begin searching and applying directly for internships at the start of the fair on February 20th.

Campus Philly connects students to a Greater Philadelphia by encouraging them to study, explore live and work in the tri-state region.
